WILL ABOLISH THE DEATH PENALTY

Watson's Bill to Do Away with Hanging Recommended for Passage by the Committee of the Whole-Routine Work of the Senate.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 14 .- | Special to THE BRE.]-The house devoted the morning session to the consideration of bills on third reading, and failed to reject any of those placed on their passage. The following bills were passed:

House roll No. 113, by Oakley, to provide for the education, support, maintenance, protection and detention of minors, by a protection and detention of minors, by a vote of 69 to 3.

House roll No. 91, by Watson, to provide for the security and payment of rebate vouchers, or certificates issued by incorporated companies, trust, associations, firms and individuals, and to provide a penalty for the violation of this act, by a vote of 78 to 7.

House roll No. 371, by Felton, to aspiropriate money to employ counsel to assist in prosecuting certain state cases. By a vote corporations, companies or persons intend-ing to construct or operate railroads in the state of Nebraska to complete and operate fifty miles of their said railroad every two years, after the expiration of three years from the date of their purchase of the right of way, and to provide a penalty for their fadure to so complete and operate their said railroad. By a vote of 65 to 10.

House roll No. 179, by Keckley, for ditching and draining wet or swamp land and to brotect the same by levees and to repeal all acts in conflict with the same. By a vote of 63 to 5.

A recess was then taken until 2 o'clock.
At the afternoon session a motion to go into committee of the whole to consider bills specially advanced on the general file was defeated. The house continued its work of the morning in passing bills on third reading. The following additional bills were

House roll No. 225, by Nason, for draining and protecting marsh, swamp or bottom lands in the state of Nebraska, and to repeal an act entitled "An act to provide for draining swamp lands in the state of Nebraska," approved February 28, 1881, and to provide a method to assess benefits and reward the damages, if any, arising therefrom by a vote of 60 to 1.

Willing to Abolish the Death Penalty.

The house then went into a committee of The house then went into a committee of the whole, with Schappel in the chair, to take up house roll No. 111. by Watson, to provide for the punishment of murder in the first degree, and to abolish the penalty of McKesson moved to substitute for it senate file No. 14, by Moore, leaving the death penalty at the discretion of a jury, and a hot discussion was on at once.

Watson made a plea for the entire abolition of the death penalty, eloquently urging that the sentiment of advancing civilization de anded it. He said that the death penalty increased the number of murders instead of decreasing it, as jurors did not like to condemn a man to death and released many criminals who would otherwise. leased many criminals who would otherwise be convicted. He also called attention to the difficulty of obtaining a jury because of that fair.

McKesson defended the death penalty, in-McKesson defended the death penarty, in-sisting that there were some crimes so atrocious and horribue that the fiend that committed them ought to be deprived of life. Casper decried the increasing maudlin sentimentality of the time, when murderers sentimentality of the time, when murderers were made the recipients of expensive bo-quets of flowers. He thought that civiliza-tion had made pretty good strides in getting from a condition of affairs where a man was hanged for stealing a turkey down to where he was only hanged for killing a fellow man, and he hoped that the senate file would be-come law, as the proper restrictions would then be given, and the death penalty could still be inflicted in such cases as made it de-

Smith of Holt called attention to the scriptural assertion that whosoever shed-deth man's blood by man shall his blood be

Porter insisted that civilization had grown entirely away from the provisions of the old

Davies backed up Watson's bill in an eloquent speech, in which the declared that the opposition had not attempted to answer the argument that innocent men were sometimes hanged under a death penalty law, and that the great wrong could not then be

Ricketts insisted that the injunction "Thou shalt not kill," handed down on Sinai was just as much a law and in force today as when imparted to Moses, and he denied that any legislature could in moral right say that twelve men might condemn a fellow mortal to death.

Higgins said that if it was held that Ricketts' position was the correct one, it was not right to kill men under any circumstances. He wanted to ask the gentleman if he did not think it right to kill men in order to preserve a nation or emancipate a race.

The colored member from Douglas insisted that the question had nothing to do with the question before the house.

Dobson delivered an impassioned plea for the abolition of the death penalty, saying that he could not sit on a jury to sign a man's life away.

Woods declared that if it was wrong for Woods declared that if it was wrong for twelve men one man to kill it was wrong for twelve men one man to kill it was wrong for twelve men to do it.

Kessler defended capital punishment, citing lynching in support of his assertion that the people enmasse rose up to punish by death particularly atrocious crimes.

Watson secured the floor a second time and held the attention of the committee while he referred to a number of cases that had come under his personal observation.

Casper thought that a great deal of the talk that had been unloaded had been in the interest of the man behind the bars, who was looking out across the jail yard, and was looking out across the jail yard, and not in the interest of the honest man sleeping peacefully in his bed.

The motion to substitute was lost, and the house bill was recommended for passage.

Ames' Arbitration Bilt.

No. 120, by Ames, to provide for a state board of arbitration, came next on the general file. It was stated that the introducer was not persont and it was rumored that he was sick in Washington.—Some of the members asserted that they would make his bill sick whether he was sick or not, and refused to allow it to was sick or not, and his bill sick whether he was sick or not, and refused to allow it to go over.

The bill provides that the governor treasurer and attorney general constitute a board of arbitration. It was amended to make the lieutenant governor and the two senior regents of the university constitute the board. The pay was fixed at $5 per day while actually engaged, for traveling and other expenses. The bill was recommended for passage, and the committee rose and reported.

The report was adopted and the house then took a recess until 7:30 o'clock.

Maximum Rate Bill Referred and More Ap-

Propriations Increased.

Laxcoln, Neb., March 14.—[Special to THE Bun. | - President Correll presided over the deliberations of the senate at its session this

After the reading of the journal Senator McCarty presented a perition from the members of the Railway Employes association protesting against the passage of a maximum rate bill. A similar petition was offered by Senator Stewart. Senator Johnson presented two counter petitions from farmers, asking for the passage of the bill.

From the committee on finance, ways and means, Senator Daie reported senate file No. 240, to authorize county clerks to advertise annually for bids for the furnishing of county supplies, with the recommendation that it be placed on general file.

Senator Harris, chairman of the special committee appointed to inspect and count the school bonds held by the state, reported that the whole amount of bonds held by the state treasurer is $2,509,372.35, held in trust for the following funds: Permanent university fund, $2,510,872.35; permanent university fund, $2,500; Agricultural college endowment fund, $40,000; Normal endowment fund, $40,000; Normal endowment fund, $40,000. These bonds the committee inspected and counted. They found all coupons due and paid, duly clipped and canceled and all bonds stamped with the words: "This bond belongs to the permanent school fund of the state of Nebraska and is not negotiable." The committee further recommended that the state treasurer be given additional annually for bids for the furnishing of NEW RATES FOR NEBRASKA that the state treasurer be given additional elerical help in his office, as the present force is entirely too small to do the work.

Referred the Rate Bill.

House roll No. 33, the house committee maximum rate bill, was read the second time and referred to the committee on rail-ground in Wyuks cemetery in the city of Lincoln as a burial place for deceased union soldiers, was read the third time and passed. Senate file No. 194, amending the irrigation laws, was read the third time and passed.
